INTRODUCTION.

The Library of the American Institute was organized in the year 1833. At a meeting of the Institute held on the fourth day of February, 1833, a resolution was offered by Robert K. Moulton, that a committee be appointed to report on the subject of a Library for the Institute, which was adopted, and Robert K. Moulton, Joseph P. Simpson, William Inglis, Clarkson Crolius, and George Bacon were appointed.

The Committee subsequently reported a plan for the organization of the Library, which was adopted on the twenty-second day of July, 1833; and the Institute then made an appropriation of five hundred dollars to the Library. On the thirteenth of February, 1834, an additional appropriation of five hundred dollars was made by the Institute.

Although the Institute made appropriations to the Library, and furnished room for its accommodation, the members of the Institute, as such, were only entitled to read the books in the Library; none except the shareholders being entitled to take books from the Library. Persons not members of the Institute were allowed to become shareholders.

The following is a copy of the heading of the original subscription paper, signed by the shareholders of the Library:

"STATISTICAL LIBRARY OF THE AMERICAN INSTITUTE.

"Subscribers to this paper agree to contribute twenty-five dollars in money or books, towards the above Library. When the contributions are completed, scrip will be issued for shares, which will entitle each contributor to one volume from the Library, 'subject to the regulations that may be adopted,' and the Reading Room will at all times be open to such contributors between certain hours of the day. The privilege may be transferred with the approbation of the Committee having charge of the Library. The most useful works, embracing modern improvements for the last fifty years, will be procured."

THADDEUS B. WAKEMAN, then Corresponding Secretary, and EDWIN WILLIAMS, then Recording Secretary, not only signed the paper, but procured a large number of subscribers.

JAMES TALLMADGE, the President of the Institute, made a donation of Niles' Register, which had been purchased by him for one hundred dollars.

The following is a copy of the Library Scrip issued to contributors:

LIBRARY OF THE AMERICAN INSTITUTE.

This Scrip represents share for which twenty-five dollars have been paid, and entitles to the ordinary privileges of the Reading Room and Library of the American Institute, and also to take one volume from the library, subject to the terms and regulations of the Library Committee, the privilege transferable only by approbation of said Committee.

NEW YORK, 18

The first share of Library Scrip was issued on the twenty-third day of June, 1834.

The Library was first opened at the rooms of the Institute, in the year 1833, in Liberty street, near Broadway, in this city. In 1834 the Library and Institute removed to No. 41 Cortlandt street. The Institute and Library remained there until 1836, when a lease was taken by the Institute of the 2d floor of No. 187 Broadway, at a rent of $1000 a year, where they remained for three years. In 1839 the Institute and Library were removed to rooms in the new City Hall in the Park, rented from the corporation for four years, at a rent of $400. In 1843 the corporation granted a free lease to the Institute for 10 years, subject to the right of the corporation to terminate the same when wanted for public purposes. In 1848 the corporation terminated the lease, additional rooms being wanted for court rooms.

In November, 1848, the Institute hired the second floor of the building corner of Broadway and Anthony street, at the rent of $1000 per year. There being no accommodation for the Library in those rooms, the books were carefully packed up and stored.

After the close of the Annual Fair in the fall of the year 1848, there appeared to be a general desire among the members to obtain a permanent location for the Institute.

The Institute having accumulated about $17,000, being the surplus proceeds of their Fairs, in the spring of 1849 purchased the building now occupied by them, No. 351 Broadway, for $45,000, on which there is now a mortgage for $25,000, payable on May 1st, 1854, to meet which the Institute have now invested, on bond and mortgage, $10,000.

The Institute removed to their new building in June, 1849, and the Library was then unpacked and re-opened, for the use of the shareholders and members of the Institute.

The Library Room is 80 feet long, by 25 feet wide, and has been handsomely fitted up by the Institute with glass cases, gas fixtures, &c., at an expense of $702 19.

Connected with the Library is a Reading Room furnished with the newspapers published in the city of New York, and one newspaper from each of the principal cities in the United States, and also with the principal periodicals and scientific magazines published in the United States and Great Britain.

As the Institute had at various times voted appropriations of money to the Library, increasing its value, questions arose as to the relative right of the shareholders and the Institute in the Library. The members of the Institute were not entitled to take a volume from the Library until the first day of May, 1850, when that privilege was given to them by the new By-Laws.

For the purpose of settling the questions as to the rights of the shareholders, a paper was drawn up and signed by fifteen of them, releasing their rights as such, to the Institute, and which was presented at a meeting held on 11th of April, 1850; whereupon a resolution was passed that shareholders who should release their rights in the Library, should be life-members of the Institute, and a special vote of thanks to those shareholders who had so released their rights was passed.* Since that time nearly all the shareholders have released their rights and become members of the Institute for life.

Up to that time, April 11, 1850, the Institute had contributed to the Library for the purchase of books	$2,478 25
Contributed by shareholders, in money and books	2,494 29
Donations made by members and others, valued at	1,270 00
Since 1st May, 1850, the Institute has expended for books	948 03
Total amount contributed and expended for books for the Library	$7,190 57

Since May, 1850, when the present committee was elected, there have been added to the Library 1280 volumes, and its gradual increase has been provided for by an annual appropriation, passed by the Institute on the sixth day of March, 1851, of $500 a year for five years. The Library is now composed of 5860 volumes.

We add, for the information of the members, the By-Laws of the Institute relating to the Library, and the Rules and Regulations of the Library now in force, which were adopted May 23, 1850.
